

Epigraph

“Two lambs were chosen of the flock to assist on the journey. If I was to have taken the entire flock, would that not have shown that love is derived of abundance? Love is a connecting flow like a great river. As the water flows, all that is touched feels the same presence. Such as it is with two lambs, two drops of water becoming a flow into multitudes of hearts. For love has not a start nor end, but a moment when the heart is touched and made to feel connected to our home in the Sun.”

There is only one true world, with many levels of understanding within. Now many of you are coming together once again and in so doing, you will have a new entry to the adventures. Are you ready to journey?*

In the center of a great lotus, within the Sun, a goddess resides. Her lotus is the creation inspiring her being. The goddess is a creation born of the Mother and Father of all Elders in the Sun.

The goddess has very long black hair, crystal blue eyes, and magnificent wings, laced in the gold of the Sun, draping her garment of white. She wears a band around her crown laced with fresh flowers, which are infinite in their life and creation.

She is echoed through tones that are emitted from her voice. The tones then vibrate into understandings that are translated to beings of all Universes and worlds. She is a goddess who watches over the transformations of many beings, as they would choose to recreate their forms from beings of the land, to beings of the waters, as she is of both.

Holding the elements of earth and water, she assists in the creation of the Earth world, helping the Mother of the Elders to hold the balance of the womb of thoughts that gave birth to the Earth world.

The Earth world, in trying to find balance, would warm itself from the center. The goddess would cap the world with frozen water until a time came when a choice was made by all Elders of the Sun, to provide a beautiful world where beings from all Universes that chose to do so, might experience the Earth world in a density of light waves, taking the form of humanness.

The original thought of taking form on the Earth world would be the choice to be He (hay)-man, representing a bridge of form between He (hay), source of creation, and man, being of the Earth world.

As beings chose to experience in both the form of the Mother and the Father, He (hay) became the tone of Hu, with the tone of 'u' to represent the feminine energy of the Sun.

The goddess was created in peace and balance, as was her home, being of both the Earth world and the water, brought together as the perfection of the Mother and the Father. She found her peace in the sanctity of her lotus within the Sun.

As she found peace, she also chose to birth another through her thoughts that held the beauty of the Universes. As the goddess contemplated what beauty she would bless in her home in the Sun, a beautiful six-pointed star spoke to her.

The star held great energy and love for all Universes; she chose the energy of the star blended with her energy to take form in her home in the lotus. This energy had hair like the Sun, and eyes of golden light reflected off the water.

Adventures Of Moniko

The energy she would give birth to would possess playfulness and curiosity of all she had watched over in the many forms of land and water. Her birth of energy with the star brought Moniko into form in her home. Moniko would be the breath of life that only the goddess and the star could blend in such an energetic form.

Moniko became the goddess's creation. Her energy was of the Mother and Father of the Elders. Moniko was given birth to be love, joy, harmony and curiosity, yet with an infinite thirst for understanding and knowledge of all Universes. Through the evolution of Moniko and all that he shall be, also shall this be true of all worlds.

Moniko would be the peace of birth. Moniko would be as the first thought of birth. The love, joy, and curiosity of birth would also be a sign of eternal evolution for all worlds to know. With Moniko, the goddess had intertwined the golden ribbon of truth created within her bridge of creation.

The Story of Moniko

This is the story of Moniko.*

Moniko is a small spirit that appeared to be about six Earth years old when this story began. This story is from very long ago in Earth time.

Moniko was very precocious and fun loving. He loved the mystery of each moment. He would run through his home in the Sun and feel the warmth and light that surrounded him. From the Sun, Moniko would feel a burst of energy rising up through his feet and swiftly filling him as he flew about his world.

Moniko lived on a tiny inlet just off the shore in the Sea of the Sun. His Elder was the one that brought him the knowledge that would fill his thoughts and answer his questions, as Moniko always seemed to have such an inquisitive mind. Moniko knew that the time would come when he would need to understand all that his Elder was preparing to teach him.

Moniko was given the opportunity to venture beyond the Sun for understanding and knowledge. The only companions on the journey would be the memories of his home in the Sun. Moniko knew that he always had the choice to return to his home if he wished to do so.

Moniko was told of a very old city made of crystal that had once covered a place on Earth. This city was a magnificent place where all needs were but a thought away, to be instantly requested and fulfilled. For hunger, heat/cold, day/night did not exist – even momentarily. The great city was so bright that the only light needed day or night was the beam that radiated between the crystals and the sun. Moniko was told that with a great wave of the hands of the Elders, that city was now within reach of their home in the Sun.

Even with all the magnificence of his home, Moniko did not carry the knowledge of the crystal city, which originated on Earth, according to the Elder. What Moniko so wanted to understand could not be known from just the thought and image of the crystal city on Earth.

Moniko approached the Elder. The Elder was a comforter for him. He asked the Elder “How may I know Earth? What can I expect to experience on Earth? Will I be one with all worlds as I choose to experience Earth?”

The Elder looked upon Moniko and just said, “All choices are yours, Moniko, here and there.”

Moniko spoke to the Elder, saying, “I choose to experience a special love, in a least expected way, for this place known as Earth!”

“So be it, Moniko, this shall be so,” said the Elder.

The Elder then told Moniko to close his eyes. As he closed his eyes, the Elder waved his great energy across Moniko’s eyes.

When Moniko opened his eyes, he was now in a place much different from his home in the Sun. Vast waters surrounded him as far as he could see. There were sand and mountains behind him and the sky was a brilliant aqua. He looked around and realized that the Elder was no longer with him and all beings that were part of his home were not to be seen. He had chosen to experience Earth in such haste that he had not thought to bring what was familiar to him -- not even companions to join him in the experience.

The feeling of being alone in this moment engulfed his being. He cried out to the Elder. “How will I experience this special love if I do not have a companion to show me the way? What am I to love, or be loved by when I am so alone, Elder?”

At that moment, a magnificent bird flew towards Moniko from the Sea. It was a great seagull. Moniko did not see any land from where this bird took flight.

He saw the bird as being sent from the Elder to help guide him on this adventure on Earth. Moniko thanked the Elder for sending this seagull to be his guide.

As Moniko was a very good flyer himself, an excitement stirred inside – and a vision of taking flight with this bird over the sea and mountains, as he had done in his home in the Sun, filled him with joy. Moniko imagined that he would spend his moments flying with his new companion and friend.

Moniko found a rock formation along the seashore above the sand. He climbed the formation, which stood three times higher than he was, and stretched his toes out over the edge of the rock, above the sandy beach. Moniko called to his new friend to join him in flight. Moniko took a deep breath of the sea air and leaped into flight. However, as he left the rock formation, he felt himself quickly fall to the ground.

Moniko thought, "Surely this must be a mistake." He once again climbed the rock formation and took flight again. Yet, once more, he fell to the sand.

Moniko looked up towards his new friend still on the rock and heard the bird making loud tones that sounded as though he was amused by Moniko's inability to take flight.

Moniko turned his head up towards the bird and declared loudly, "You are pretty funny, my friend!" The huge bird quieted and said, "Not funny, but you may call me Fernae.

Moniko looked again at the bird, thankful that his new companion could speak, as did all the birds at his home in the Sun. Again, he thanked his Elder for what had been provided and understood that in this adventure the method of transporting himself would be on his feet.

Fernae then flew down to him and told him of the many ways that the Earth and Sun were different, and how the abilities that Moniko had in his home would be seen differently here on Earth.

As Fernae spoke, the Sun that was so familiar to Moniko began to descend into the sea. He wondered how this Earth could find existence without the sun.

Moniko felt a feeling inside of himself below his heart – a feeling he had never felt before. It was as if the sea was tumbling inside of him, with a wanting that he had never experienced before.

He asked Fernae, “What is this feeling inside of me? Does this feeling happen, when the Sun goes into the Sea?”

“No, what you are feeling, young Moniko, is known in this world as hunger,” Fernae replied.

“Hunger?” Moniko asked.

“Hunger is when the physical body is in need of replenishment, Moniko,” Fernae stated.

“In my home in the Sun, I did not have a need to replenish the inside with outside needs,” Moniko said.

“How do I give this body what is needed, Fernae, to stop the rumbling?” Moniko sighed.

“On Earth, fresh water and food are needed each cycle of the Sun and Moon to replenish the body that you now inhabit. Now you shall learn how to care for your hunger,” Fernae replied. Fernae flew towards the Sea in the light of the Moon. Moniko watched as Fernae went into the sea and then back into the air.

Fernae then returned to Moniko and out of the companion's large mouth a substance fell to the ground.

"What is this that you have brought from the sea, Fernae?" Moniko asked.

"Seaweed. This will stop the hunger you are feeling," Fernae replied to Moniko.

Moniko put the seaweed in his mouth and ate what Fernae had offered, still not quite understanding the need on Earth to replenish from outside the body. Moniko then felt weary. This was another feeling that he was not familiar with. As the moments of this adventure replayed in Moniko's thoughts, his eyes closed and once again, he returned to his home in the Sun.

Upon Moniko's return to the Sun the Elder met him. The Elder looked at Moniko and just smiled.

"Moniko did you find the special love you were seeking on Earth?"

Moniko replied "Oh yes, Elder! I loved the adventure. I loved my friend and companion Fernae, and most of all I loved to learn how much I appreciate my home in the Sun. I understand, Elder, why choices are made to adventure to Earth. Without the experience, would I know the differences of the Sun and Earth? I could imagine, I could see, but I could not understand."

Moniko took a huge jump and began to fly around. As the Elder watched, Moniko questioned, "Have you chosen adventures on Earth?"

The Elder replied, "Yes, Moniko, many adventures," and smiled.

Moniko looked at the Elder puzzled. "Why did you choose to experience Earth, when all that is needed is provided for us in our home in the Sun?"

The Elder responded. "Moniko, by choosing adventures on Earth, just as you have, the knowledge and appreciation for our home in the Sun becomes much greater. When we have experiences that seem to be opposite of what is known, it creates an even greater love for what we have here in our home in the Sun."

"Choosing an adventure outside of our home in the Sun, such as Earth, or any destination that we desire, is to be done with planning, so that we might return with a greater knowledge and understanding of the adventure that we created.

"You were allowed, Moniko, to take a grand adventure, and you did learn. Again, you may choose an adventure knowing that as you grow and learn outside of your home in the Sun, you will also learn and grow in your home here. Choose wisely, Moniko; choose from the heart, which sustains you in your life in the Sun. For when you adventure elsewhere, the same heart energy will sustain you in all your experiences and adventures."

LS Myers

As Moniko thought of what the Elder had told him, he saw above him, his brother Manitou, a great white eagle that had come to find him. In seeing his brother the great White Eagle, Moniko ran and flew to be with him. As he flew, he remembered Fernae as though he were a brother on Earth.

Moniko called out. "Elder, this is the love that I have, the love that soars in my heart. If I choose another adventure, the adventure will be with another as my brother. For I shall then forever take my wings to fly."

As Moniko waved, he and his brother Manitou disappeared. From that moment on, Moniko and Manitou shared all adventures as one, never to be parted, as one is the other in form.

Chapter Two

The Garden of Antiquity

As Moniko was gaining wisdom and knowledge with the guidance of the Elder, he was beginning to understand that strength is born of knowledge. Moniko felt himself becoming stronger. As he stood on the hill in the Garden of Antiquity, each breath would fill his heart and soul with peace. Surrounding Moniko were fields creating layers carpeted in flowers and species of the Mother of the Elders from every corner of the Universe. Each flower was alive and waiting to speak to Moniko of the journey of its creation. Each flower was teaching Moniko of the wonderment that it held in each petal and fold of its being.*

Moniko's home in the Sun held a joy of life that never ceased to exist. The Garden of Antiquity held so many voices of knowledge that told of ancient memories of life from all imaginable corners of thought. As many Universes had chosen cycles that ceased to exist, Moniko would return to his home in the Sun and the Garden of Antiquity with the memories of other worlds. Moniko would forever share his understanding of these experiences, as only he was able to do so.

Within the Garden, many carpets of beauty lined its paths. One path in the Garden led to a beautiful pool and waterfall. The beauty of this waterfall was held in sanctity to all beings of the Sun. The waterfall flowed with a liquid crystal energy, which cascaded down into a pool of water below, radiating a shimmer into the skies of the Sun. Continuous groups of Elders, beings of the Sun, would gather around the pool sharing their energy, and a beautiful flower of radiance was born of the combined energy. The flower that was created was then sent to be with other beings that were on journeys outside of the Sun, as they had chosen.

Moniko had always loved watching the energy flowers become a creation of love to be sent to other traveling souls. As Moniko was watching during this visit to the Garden of Antiquity, a beautiful blue light came over the pool. This blue light reached down as if having fingertips that would touch each crown of the Elders who had gathered. As the blue light touched each crown, a crystal was passed through the energy to rest in the crown of the Elders. The circle of Elders then became blue within their light. Moniko had visited the garden many times, observing the experience of the Elders. However, this was the first time Moniko had observed what was now unfolding before him.

As his thoughts raced as to what this might be, his Elder appeared next to him. Moniko turned and said,

“Elder, I have visited the garden often but have never seen this. What might the Elders be a part of?”

“Moniko, what you are seeing is a ceremony of magnitude,” the Elder replied.

The Elder continued. “As the blue light came over the Elders, with the crystal magnifying their energy fields, another Universe had chosen to find its way to their home in the Sun.

“When the Sun was created, many Universes existed. Not all Universes chose to be part of the beauty of our home here. They chose instead to continue as a creation separate from the Sun -- to exist in a world without the Sun. What you know as the beauty of light, with all that is provided for you, is not the truth of all existence. All Universes are welcome to be part of the light that is known to you. When the choice is made for a Universe to return to the Sun, a group of Elders is chosen to assist that Universe in returning. Each Elder that prepares for the return is given a color to be guided by. The color then becomes a pathway to our home in the Sun. The Elders that have chosen to guide the Universe home become one with the color of guidance.

“At this moment, Moniko, another Universe has chosen to be among us, and brings its light into our home. The Elders will forever hold their light in blue as they travel and guide that Universe.”

Moniko pondered for a few moments what had just transpired. His thoughts were of his home, and the beauty it provided to all beings. Moniko understood the knowledge the Elder had given, and although he felt the excitement of knowing many Universes were choosing to return to be a part of the Sun, he was yet to truly understand life in the Universes still existing outside of his home.

Moniko's heart was full of joy for all that continuously chose to journey outward and then return at will to his home in the Sun.

Chapter Three

Journey of the White Eagle

*A*s Moniko was looking to the sea, the breeze felt cool and fresh to his energy. Moniko's home in the Sun experienced energy shifts as needed, much as the seasons of change on Earth. Moniko stood on the shore for many moments before bringing his arms over his head. He so enjoyed the shifts of energy in the Sun that would accompany shifts of energy within him. As the breeze blew around Moniko with his arms stretched high, he looked to the skies of the Sun and saw his brother Manitou flying high above him. As the magnificent white eagle flew, Moniko leapt and soared to be with him.

As Moniko joined his brother at the wing, Moniko asked, "Manitou, when the energy shifts as now, what is it that soars within the great eagle?"

"Moniko, as you are also feeling the energy, shifts feel much like great waves that we are able to glide through. On Earth, the creatures of the sea glide through the water as we choose to glide in the air. But yet the eagle soars through the air in all worlds, unchanged. For I do not take to the sea on Earth, or to the feet as you might on Earth. “The eagle is constant in form and desire in all worlds or Universes,” replied Manitou.

“Manitou, my brother, tell me of a journey that brings you joy,” said Moniko.

Manitou replied, “Moniko, I will tell you of a journey of appreciation. All are appreciated, for this journey built a bridge for all eagles between all worlds.”

“Manitou,” Moniko said with such excitement, “I shall fly with you in memory of the journey.”

“As I was perched on the great tree in the Forest of Acceptance,” Manitou began, “I heard the Elder call out to me. Being so high in the tree, I acknowledged the call with a great tone that rang out over the forest. When the Elder heard the tone, he appeared in the tree, to speak of a journey to be taken. On Earth, the times were of change. A group of travelers on Earth were moving to a new home. Their home that had been lush and plentiful for as long as they could remember was growing cold without enough replenishment available to provide for the sustenance of the group. The coldness that was moving across their land would be part of it for many cycles of the Sun. For the group to survive, they needed to be led to a place of abundance that would provide all that was needed to survive.”

“Fear was with the group. They knew that where they were to travel was not of their knowledge, nor were they sure that the journey would not lead them to a place where the earth stopped at the Sea. They were on a new journey of faith and trust in the heart. They had traveled before, but only a distance of 30 Sun cycles. Beyond the cycles, all was unknown. The method of travel would be on the ground, walking to a new place of abundance and life for all that chose to be with them. Mountains surrounded the home, which they had lived in for more generations than remembered. How would they know which direction to take as a group? To ease the pain and suffering of the group, the Elder chose me to be the wings of the journey.

“This group had long held their faith and prayers in the land/skies that blessed their being. The Elder knew they would trust a spirit to be one with them in their form, and that was the form of the eagle. I came to the group as the white eagle, flying directly from the Sun to where they had lodged. When I landed in their circle from above, the Elders of the group welcomed me, as I turned and looked over the circle, I could feel the blessings being given for flight to be with them. The Elders of the group then stood up and extended their arms towards my form. The Elders then cried out for knowledge of why I had been sent to be upon them. To travel with them there was a need to be of their form. At that moment, I shifted my energy to be as the form of the Elders. I wrapped my great wings around my form, shifting the energy to be of the eagle but yet of the man.

“I told the group I had been sent to be the wings on their journey to a new home and land of abundance. I would fly beyond the mountains and search for a direction that could be traveled without pain and suffering. For each Elder of the group, I gave a feather to be placed in the crown of the head. By doing this at the highest of heights, I would know where the group was on the journey. Since each would have a part of my energy in the feather, our energy would always be connected, with all thoughts to be as one.

“As the Elders listened, lines of pain and suffering long held in their faces became joy and hope for the journey. They could now rest and replenish their bodies, so the journey would be fresh with the next rising of the Sun. The Elders then spoke to all of the travelers of the group. As the group rested, I once again took the form of the eagle, flying beyond all mountains that surrounded them, looking towards a path of least resistance for the hearts, minds and souls of the group.

“When the Sun rose, I once again stood before the Elders. During the time of the Moon, I had found a path that was between the mountains, yet covered by a forest. Travelers - large, small, young and old, were led by their Elders, as I told them a direction that would lead them beyond all mountains. As they traveled the forest, many large deer met the group, offering to carry the bundles that burdened their walk. The deer agreed to allow the group to release their spirits in exchange for what was needed for replenishment of their bodies on the journey.

“As they came upon a lake in the forest, the fish came to the surface in agreement to have their spirits released as needed for the journey. Water was put into large pouches that the deer carried for the group. A great Bear then approached the group, requesting that the spirit of his being be released to provide warmth for their bodies on the journey. The spirit of the great bear then stayed with the group for the remainder of the journey, providing knowledge of the land and determining where the group of travelers might have shelter from the cold to sleep and warm their bodies.

“Many other creatures of the forest came forth and agreed to help the travelers. The wolves carried small children though the journey, keeping them warm. As the group of travelers passed through the mountains, their spirits stayed strong. Their bodies did not weaken. Harmony guided the steps of the walk. The group walked for 60 Sun cycles through a great canyon in the mountains. After 40 Sun cycles, each new cycle brought them new warmth from the skies. As they walked, the burdens of the deer became less to carry on the journey. As the burdens of the deer were lessened, their spirits were released for replenishment as needed. Yet the spirits of the deer would remain on the journey.

“After the 60th Sun cycle, the group of travelers came to a new land and home. Water was plentiful, with abundance to feed their bodies. An agreement was made with all creatures that their spirits would only be released if the Earth body of such spirits was fully used, and then the creature would part in spirit with joy.

“At the end of the journey, I once again took human form. I told the Elders of my home in the Sun and agreed to always have eyes on their people in their world and here on Earth. I then returned to my home in the Sun.”

As they flew, Moniko wondered why there was a need on Earth for so many creatures to have agreements to assist, rather than like his home in the Sun where all were as one, without a need to depart their spirit in order to assist.

“Moniko,” Manitou said, “Earth has yet to learn to assist in all forms. For one to agree to assist another form in separation, as long as separation exists and where all is yet to be seen as one, peace agreements are formed. In our home in the Sun, replenishment is internal through joy and love for all beings. Earth has yet to fully recognize that all are the same, just energy shifted in many forms. When Earth is truly within this knowledge, then it shall be as above, so below. It shall be this way on all worlds eventually. For now, our many journeys to assist will yet be the wind beneath the wings of the Mother Elder’s womb of thoughts, so as the eagle soars between all worlds, all worlds will be as one.

Chapter Four

Moniko's Journey to the City of Light

As Moniko stretched, he sat by the shore of knowledge on the Sea of the Sun. His thoughts were swept to the City of Light here in his home in the Sun. The Elder had told him of the journey that would be made to the City of Light. Anticipation and gratitude filled him with excitement of the journey. The Elder had chosen to take his small companion Moniko to the Library of Wisdom in the City of Light.*

The Elders brought the City of Light from Earth. When the City of Light was part of Earth all beings in the City of Light on Earth traveled freely between the Sun and Earth just as Moniko and the Elder would travel today to venture to the Library of Wisdom.

All knowledge of the Sun was fully understood by those on Earth that called the City of Light home. Thoughts were instantly manifested on Earth, as is so in the Sun. Moniko had been told by the Elder that although Sun beings were on Earth as in the Sun, Earth also created a constant pull on beings that had chosen to be there. Fear became present, and Earth beings felt a need to be higher than one another in ability and power. This pull brought feelings of need that were not understood by those that had chosen to be a part of the City of Light on Earth.

The Elders were then brought together to make a choice for the good of the City of Light. All beings that had made the choice to journey to Earth as part of the City of Light were returned to the Sun with a great wave of energy of the Elders. Once these beings chose to be more knowledgeable and understanding, the City of Light would be returned to Earth.

For now, the City of Light was of the Sun. The Elder had told Moniko, that he would be taken to the City of Light to learn the knowledge contained within a library of thought processing. This library held a temple structure of magnificent beauty where thoughts from beings of all Universes were heard and understood. This library held all thoughts eternally. All thoughts in the Library of Wisdom were memories to be accessed by all beings.

Moniko had long heard of the Library of Wisdom, yet this would be the small spirit's first journey. The Elder had chosen to limit the details, making this journey very exciting to Moniko. Soon the Elder would join Moniko for the journey. As Moniko's thoughts raced through his being about the Library of Wisdom, the Elder appeared.

“Moniko,” the Elder smiled, “This is now the moment for our journey.” Moniko bounced up to join the Elder.

“Elder,” Moniko said, so excited that his words were being caught within his breath. “I have so waited for this journey. The City of Light is of such beauty. How soon will the journey begin?”

The Elder waved the arm of his robe over Moniko, and as the robe relaxed again beside the Elder, they were standing at the gates of the City of Light. Crystal structures of the City of Light were very pure, each one shining as rainbows encompassed in each crystal. Gates to the City were only separated from the crystals by shifts in the energy that allowed the gates to appear as being different. Moniko’s home in the Sun was a creation of beautiful thoughts of splendor shared as one by all beings to create a home that was of all Universes dancing in harmony with each other.

Moniko had been told that long ago, Earth was created from the most beautiful thoughts of the Elders to be as the home in the Sun. Those thoughts were given to the Mother of All Elders. She then took all thoughts as given, creating a womb of thoughts. From the womb of thoughts, Earth was created and born of the Mother of the Elders. For as long as the Mother of the Elders held the thoughts, Earth would be as the Sun in form. She would then nurture and love Earth as the child creation of the Sun.

LS Myers

The City of Light was as a small Universe of creation within the Sun. The City of Light rested on a Sea of Crystal. The Sea of Crystal was perfectly formed as a bed of eight-sided opalescent stones. Each stone was a separate energy center. To be a part of the stone's energy in return, each represented multitudes of radiance becoming pathways to all Universes. As beings would choose to leave a journey elsewhere in the Universes, in doing so they would then ascend through the pathways, instantly returning to the City of Light and their home in the Sun.

As Moniko and the Elder crossed into the City of Light, beings of the city would acknowledge those that were returning through the pathways with a constant outpouring of love to each as they returned. The City of Light had many mansions in appearance. Those that chose to remain in the City of Light were allowed to do so. Many were also leaving the City of Light to return to their familiar home in the Sun.

Though Moniko had seen the city before, each time he was overwhelmed by the awe of those being received. Many Elders were present in the city. They had chosen to be receivers of the returning light beings of the Sun. At the center of the City of Light was a great fountain. From the fountain a constant flow of crystal energy emanated. Beings would cross the fountain in a renewal of energy.

The courtyard of the City of Light was constantly bursting with the energy of dancing. Dancing not only energized all beings, but also energized the City of Light. To dance was to release love to all Universes.

Many creatures that the Mother of the Elders had put in the seas of Earth flew about the Sea of Crystal in the City of Light. As the Elder and Moniko crossed the courtyard, large crystal structures of temples stood in a formation of the Sun. One of the magnificent crystal temples was the Library of Wisdom.

As they approached the Library of Wisdom, two of the most ancient of Elders greeted them. The ancient keepers of the Library of Wisdom spoke only with their thoughts. As the keepers acknowledged Moniko and the Elder, they smiled and let Moniko know they were proud of the journey the small spirit had undertaken. With a wave of their energy, Moniko and the Elder were then within the Library of Wisdom. A great hall formed in a perfect circle. Moniko looked up and as far as he could see, small crystal pods lined the temple walls and ceiling. Each pod was perfectly shaped as it created a beautiful light of energy dancing within the others in perfect unison.

In the center of the hall was a great crystal that stood perfectly balanced, extending upwards to the highest of heights. Around the level of the hall where Moniko, the Elder and the Keepers stood, were many windows. Each window showed a universal thought of the Elders that became a grand experience to be shared by all that desired to journey to that moment of thought.

Moniko thought, "This being the Library of Wisdom, where are the thoughts kept, and how are they known?"

As Moniko had this thought, the Keepers of the library responded.

"Within each pod, Moniko. The pods of the crystals are record keepers. As each thought is processed, so then may the thought be received as eternal knowledge. The thoughts are released when chosen by a being and then returned as a memory."

Moniko now understood the Library of Wisdom, yet so much more knowledge was becoming part of his being. The library was like a great universal mind where thoughts were continually being shared, and as beings returned them to memory they became more available to all.

As the Keepers only processed and used thought to communicate, such was the Library of Wisdom. Moniko felt a joy fill his heart.

"Elder," Moniko asked, "As we share in our home in the Sun, so then we share with all beings of the Universes. This makes all adventures equally shared in an instant."

The Elder smiled. "Yes, Moniko, though many beings hold form, all share the same mind. All is one."

"Elder," Moniko replied, using just thought to speak, "As you stand in the Library of Wisdom in this moment you have stood within all creation."

Moniko felt the comfort of the Sun warm his heart.

“Elder, as I shall travel my journeys, I shall bring the radiance of the City of Light to all that hold memories of our home in the Sun.”

The Elder then waved his robe once again over Moniko, and they returned to the moment from where their journey had begun. As Moniko relaxed into his space, his thoughts of the adventure ran through his being and filled him with a peace, knowing that this new knowledge would be with him on his many adventures away from his home in the Sun.

Moniko then rose up and leapt in flight. As he flew, his thoughts brought creation to his desires. He flew as if for the first time, but held within him completely the knowledge of certainty that wherever he chose to journey; the memories of the Universes would always be with him.

Chapter Five

Moniko Listens to the Lambs

*O*f all the beings in the Sun, Moniko held a special fondness for the lambs. The lambs had been born in the Sun since Creation. They were considered the storytellers. Each lamb was a kind loving being called to witness many journeys beyond Moniko's home in the Sun. Moniko so loved to sit surrounded by the lambs to be told of the many adventures traveled and witnessed by their soft loving eyes.

As Moniko sat with the lambs near the base of the mountain, he asked for a story to be told. Two of the lambs came and sat near Moniko, one on each side.

"Moniko, at this moment we shall share a story that was journeyed.

"As we were playing in the fields at the base of the mountain, the Elder approached our flock. The Elder asked for two lambs that would choose to journey to Earth with the Elder. The Elder told us that at this time on Earth a special land was to become home for a group of travelers from the Sun. Much unrest was in the Earth world, and to be a part of this journey would be very special.

“The two lambs agreed to join the Elder for the journey. With a wave of energy from the Elder, the two lambs appeared in a place that was very much like their home in the Sun. The beauty they found was breathtaking.

“At this moment, though, the Sun was disappearing and the moon was rising to light the way for a group of weary travelers. The Elder had brought the two lambs to join the weary travelers, who were wandering to what seemed to be an unknown destination. It seemed peculiar to the lambs, but they felt very safe with the Elder. The Elder was leading the group of travelers on a journey. He seemed to be very deep in thought as he walked ahead of the group. He also seemed to be walking as if the knowledge of this journey was not understood.

“‘Elder’ the lambs asked, “Why is it that this group seems to lack joy?”

“The Elder responded, ‘They have chosen to leave a home that was familiar to them on Earth, in search of joy and peace.’

“‘Is peace a place on Earth?’ the lambs inquired.

“‘No, peace is very much a feeling of the heart, as in the Sun,’ the Elder replied. ‘We have walked away from what is known as home to return to a home that is of memory. When this home is found, peace will be of the heart.'

"'Elder, do you walk without peace?' asked the lambs.

"'I walk in peace with the voice of the Father of the Elders. I listen in deep thought to the knowledge of the Father who knows how to deliver those I am traveling with to their home. But yet I feel the pain and fear of those who do not have the understanding of the direction we are walking. To understand and feel their hearts that are crying in agony and fear, my walk needs to be strong so they might have hope and strength. The travelers are carrying a feeling of the Earth, which brings them discomfort. They hunger; their babies cry from hunger, heat and cold. Not all will complete the journey. Some will return to our home in the Sun before we reach our desired home on Earth.'

"'What is it that you require on the journey, Elder, from two small lambs? For we are too small to carry these travelers.'

"'I ask now that each of you finds a companion in this group. You will know your companions when you see them,' the Elder replied to the lambs.

"The two little lambs thought of what the Elder had requested.

"'Will our companions be of a human traveler, a being of this Earth?' inquired the lambs.

“Let your heart connect without judgment,’ said the Elder.

“The two lambs then became part of the traveling group. As they wandered among the travelers, their hearts were open to finding companions. Four cycles of the Sun passed; the lambs were yet to connect with their companions. Though they connected to all with their hearts, the connection was not to just one traveler.

“The two lambs returned to the Elder.

“Elder, for four sun cycles we have searched for a single companion, but have not been able to choose just one. We feel what the heart holds for each traveler, without feeling that one is to be more connected to us than the others. We call upon your wisdom, Elder, to assist with the task that you requested.’

“You two have not found a single companion, and this is as the Father of the Elders has intended. How would it be possible on a journey such as this one? To connect to one, is to separate from another in some form. Is the journey traveled in order to fulfill the peace and hope for just one, or is it for all? My two little companions from the Sun, you have done well.

“Be not of the choice to separate one from another. Love is without separation, love connects to all. Go now to the group and connect your heart energy to each wanderer, unlimited by the form or need of the travelers. Walk with the humans and play with all beings.

Smell the beauty of the Earth, that all will share the love that you bring to each heart.'

"The two lambs then freely walked and played with the travelers. As they did, the travelers walked, played and learned to be as the lambs. The two lambs walked for a very long time. As they walked with the travelers, the hearts of the group were no longer without joy, nor did their thoughts dwell upon what was, what is, or what the future would provide at the end of the journey.

"Many of the travelers ended the journey before the walk with the Elder was completed. They returned home to the Sun in joy and peace, having learned from the knowledge of the lambs. The two lambs finished the journey with the Elder. The Elder returned the traveling group to a home of memories that they held. As the journey ended, the Elder held the two lambs, and all three returned to their home in the Sun."

As Moniko finished listening to the story from the two lambs on the mountain, the Elder appeared.

"Elder," Moniko asked, "Why is it that you only chose two lambs for the journey, when so many travelers were feeling without peace and hope? If you had had all the lambs of the flock join on the journey, there would have been much joy and peace and a greater amount of love."

"Moniko," the Elder replied, "Two lambs were all that were chosen of the flock to assist on the journey. If I were to take the entire flock, would that not have shown that love is derived of abundance? Love is a connecting flow like a great river. As the water flows, all that is touched feels the same presence. Such as it is with two lambs, or two drops of water becoming a flow into multitudes of hearts. For love has not a start nor end, but a moment when the heart is touched and made to feel connected to our home in the Sun.”

Moniko smiled and gently hugged the Elder. “This I understand, Elder, with the knowledge of the story of the lambs.”

Chapter Six

Moniko and the Enchanted World

The Elder spoke to Moniko.*

“Come with me now to a place that many have heard of but are yet to understand. For on Earth such a place would be known as ‘cylinders of passage’ or ‘portals to dimensions.’

“There was a time on Earth when all that was desired was but a thought to be realized. This was a time when all took to flight. Maybe not as flight in your home in the Sun, but flight that was born of a desire, which truly would manifest in the reality that was sought.

“This time of flight is still very much alive within the Earth, but also the passage to that time has been blocked by the feeling and belief that these things are not possible. I will tell you of the place in our world where this reality is still held in a mystical magical space.

“At one point in my existence in the Sun I found myself also wondering about the mystical nature of the Sun and Earth. We were merged, but also living in separation. Why might this be, when truth is the doorway to all worlds and experiences? I traveled across the Sun observing what was manifest in many worlds, but was only potential in other worlds.

“For what is natural to the Sun, is not found on Earth but in mythology and hidden thoughts. For most, this is chosen not to be acknowledged. Earth finds joy in the magical yet chooses not to believe this to be possible. Also, Earth is constantly in a state of being born with new thoughts of the Mother of the Elders.

“In a time that could be considered long ago on the Earth world, much like now – magical beings were sought after. The magic of the dragons, fairies, and mystical creatures were fading into a cylinder of passage where acceptance still lived on Earth. What is believed lives on. What is not believed fades away from the world of thought.

“As the belief in the Sun had been sustained for many periods of your time on Earth, those that chose to experience the belief were returning to the Sun. Yet for many these thoughts were beginning to fade.

“This was a time such as now, when Elders came to many worlds, freely traveling, as they would choose to do so. What holds the Earth in form are banded thoughts creating reality. All are within the Earth, but yet not of the Earth. This brought a desire for understanding that had not been realized in the world, nor was clear in my thoughts.

“Here in the Sun resides a place known as the enchanted world. It is a place of being like a glass of wonderment to be drunk, without any desire but to be a part of the moment that is being created. Enchanted beings of all Universes are a part of this world. Dragons, fairies, and magical creatures are all a part of this special world here in the Sun.”

Moniko pondered the words of the Elder. On one such visit Moniko made to the enchanted world within the Sun, many of the mystical and magical beings that normally had such brilliant colors seemed to be fading in their brilliance. This Moniko did not understand. To be of the Sun, is to be forever of the brilliance and radiance of the Sun.

As Moniko watched the enchanted beings, his thoughts drifted. Though all the beings of the enchanted world were full of joy, how could it be that the colors they held seemed to glow with less brilliance? What might be causing this change?

As Moniko watched, a very brilliant purple dragon approached him. The color that the dragon held was a beautiful purple, but as the dragon turned, each movement also changed the dragon’s color. Moniko asked the dragon for understanding in what he was observing. Were these enchanted beings not truly existing in joy? The dragon looked at Moniko very closely, and told of a time on Earth when the brilliant enchanted beings were fading due to thoughts and beliefs held by those of the Earth world. The dragon spoke.

“Though the enchanted ones were of the Earth world, the choice to see them was being replaced by a fear of seeing them. How could it be that the vision of the enchanted ones was being replaced by a fear of enchantment? To return brilliance to the enchanted beings, faith and belief needed to be restored once again so that they might not fade from the conscious world of thought.

“The enchanted beings would remain in the unconscious world, but their presence and brilliance to the conscious world would be no longer.”

As the dragon spoke, many thoughts were with Moniko. For Earth to be conscious of the enchanted beings, as they were known, belief would need to be restored. Moniko wondered how this might be accomplished on Earth. If the people of Earth chose to no longer believe in Moniko’s home in the Sun, or the Elders, would the brilliance of Moniko’s home also fade to those of the Earth world?

In that moment, a beautiful fairy sat upon the crown of the dragon. “Moniko,” she said, “Many universal beings have chosen to no longer hold conscious thoughts of our home in the Sun. Yet the Sun has continued to radiate eternally in acceptance of all who have chosen to remember. For we have not truly faded, we are of all worlds as we are of our home in the Sun. As thoughts fade from the conscious mind into the unconscious mind, the conscious thoughts are returned to those beings, to be held with those who still believe, yet wait in a spiral of passage to once again return.”

As the fairy spoke to Moniko, he observed the beings of this enchanted world of the Sun. Their colors seemed to become much more radiant again. As Moniko found understanding, so did the beings of the enchanted world. With this knowledge, they knew they would always be radiant through all spiral passages. Their radiance was for all time and in all Universes. For the Earth world, or any other world, to choose not to carry a conscious thought, would not diminish their radiance in their home in the Sun.

As Moniko watched, four elders appeared, each with a great staff. In unison, as they raised their staffs, a multi-colored brilliance crossed the enchanted world.

As the brilliance unfolded, the Elders spoke to the enchanted beings, acknowledging that the brilliance had been unleashed across the world of enchantment, and was being unleashed in all worlds as an eternal sign. A band of energy was now available that all enchanted ones would carry while traveling within the worlds. On Earth, the band of energy would forever be known as the rainbow. The four Elders promised to forever hold this bank of energy intact for all who chose to see and believe. The enchanted world would then never fade from conscious thought.

Chapter Seven

Hall of the Majestic

Moniko held such exuberance in his spirit. He waited with anticipation to journey to the Hall of the Majestic. His excitement could not be contained. Moniko was in a perpetual dance for the journey to begin.*

The Hall of the Majestic was in the City of Light. As Moniko danced in wait, the Elder appeared. “Elder,” Moniko asked, “Is the Hall of the Majestic the greatest structure in the City of Light to travel within?”

“In your journey to the Hall of the Majestic, Moniko,” replied the Elder, “All of the City of Light is equal. Only love of the journey you are taking creates a perception where thoughts become more grandiose. Are you ready, Moniko?” the Elder asked.

“Oh yes, let the journey begin,” Moniko replied to the Elder, as Moniko bounced around the cloak of the Elder. With a wave of the Elder’s cloak, they were now once again within the City of Light. Moniko stood for a few moments absorbing the City once again. In the distance in front of Moniko, he could see a great arbor that stood in marvelous beauty at the entrance of the celestial gardens. As Moniko and the Elder traveled through the streets of the city of the Sun, the joy and beauty of the City of Light was absorbed within the spirit of Moniko as he strolled with the Elder.

The journey to visit the Hall of the Majestic, and the magnificence of the journey, were unfolding for Moniko. The Elder had chosen to bring Moniko to the Hall of the Majestic so that Moniko would have a better understanding and knowledge of the City of Light and how it was a part of all creation in the Sun.

As the Elder and Moniko approached the arbor of the celestial gardens, they were greeted by hundreds of butterflies that were home to the garden. The butterflies held the colors and size that had been gathered from all Universes that had made a home in the Sun.

“Elder,” Moniko asked, “Why are such vast numbers of butterflies within the gardens, when our home in the Sun holds the beauty that allows the butterflies to travel everywhere?”

“Moniko, the gardens are a passage of transformation in traveling to and from the Hall of the Majestic. Butterflies choosing to be part of the celestial gardens do so in assistance of transformation to others crossing garden paths to the great hall,” the Elder replied. “The City of Light has many beings from all Universes of thought and creation. There are those, which are of the Sun, beings returning to our home in the Sun, and at this time many beings finding their way to our home. As all cross the celestial gardens, transformation occurs. Separation becomes transformed; all beings are then home in the Sun, as one, without any need to be elsewhere. Celestial gardens are universal gardens created for all beings, the creation and the beauty of the Mother of all Elders.”

“I understand, Elder, as the path through the gardens are brilliant with all forms of life being as one. Therefore, all who cross the garden shall be at home in the Sun,” Moniko thought.

“Yes, Moniko, all are once again within the Mother of all Elders’ womb of thought,” the Elder responded.

As Moniko and the Elder crossed the gardens, Moniko danced with the butterflies and listened to the carpet of flowers, plant life and trees that would hug their path in the garden. As he conversed with the garden, Moniko held out his hands and sprinkled crystal droplets of water that shined like miniature rainbows as each drop landed. Moniko’s own energy was radiant with all colors of the gardens.

The Elder and Moniko came upon two benches at the end of the path, sitting at the edge of the garden. The benches created a half circle to greet another arbor at the entrance of a crystal path leading to the Hall of the Majestic. As they began to cross out of the garden to the great hall, Moniko turned and closed his eyes for a moment, breathing the essence of the celestial gardens throughout his spirit. He now proceeded with the Elder to the Hall of the Majestic. The Elder had spoken little of what Moniko might expect to learn on this journey.

As they approached the great doors of the hall, Moniko watched as huge towers of crystal turned in unison, then rolled to each side as they entered the hall. To greet them, Moniko saw four Elders, two of the great Father, and two of the great Mother. Each held a stone, which they passed to Moniko. Each stone contained eight sides in beautiful blue, aqua, red, and orange.

The voice of the four elders spoke to Moniko as one in thought.

“Moniko, at this moment you stand in the great hall. To journey to the hall is to share the belief of all being equal to the Father and Mother of all Elders, and all beings, all of creation. To cross the threshold of your sovereignty, may your thoughts from this journey always be of oneness. For in this hall all thoughts of separation are dismissed, and understanding becomes knowledge of the transformation -- all energy is purely choice of form, without the choice of finding differences in the creation of the form of energy.”

“Elder,” Moniko asked, “The truest form of energy is pure love. Although I appear as a small spirit and Elder, your form appears large and wise, am I also an Elder and part of all universal beings and forms?”

“Yes, Moniko, you and I are one. Love is all in many forms.”

As they walked through the great hall, Moniko observed how beings within it would change form through their thoughts. Moniko saw a fountain surrounded by a crystal pool of water. He watched as Elders and many beings would glide into the crystalline pool, transforming in the water. Then they would return from the pool as a brilliant form of their choice through the thought they had chosen.

Above Moniko was a dome that opened a window to all Universes and worlds. The butterflies he had seen in the garden would land and become beautiful plants or energies of beings of their choice. They would then once again transform to the butterfly in the dome of the great hall.

As the Elder and Moniko passed the fountain and pool, a great door opened to Moniko. “Moniko” the Elder said, “I am to wait as you cross through this door. I will be here when you choose to return from the room you are entering.”

As Moniko entered the room, he stood for a moment just inside. In front of him, he saw the Father and Mother of all Elders brilliantly radiant, sitting on two large chairs that appeared to be made out of polished and cut stones. Extending out from the side of each chair was six more on each side. In each chair was another great elder, equal in resemblance to the Father and Mother of Elders.

Lying in front of the great Elders were many of those that Moniko loved so much: lambs, deer, lions, tigers, unicorns, and snakes, all at peace with the Elders. Above them were dolphins, dragons, eagles and owls, filling the infinite dome of the room.

The Father of the Elders stood and extended his great hand to Moniko. "Moniko," the Father said, "At this time you have taken a journey to the great hall, and crossed into the chamber of the infinite. Though you stand in awe, and might feel small among those of this room, you have moved into an understanding of your infinite, majestic being. As you stand before the Mother and myself, and infinite council, Moniko, you also now understand that you are of all energy. As I am, you are."

"Father, Moniko spoke, "Why is it that this journey was chosen at this time?"

"Moniko, you are a brilliant star of the Sun. As you return to your home in the Sun, you return as the universal energy, with full knowledge and expanded choices. Be who you are as you journey, take the form that is needed to assist others as you journey," the Father said softly to Moniko.

"Father, when I entered the great hall I was given four stones, blue, aqua, red and orange. How do I use these stones to assist others as I take new adventures outside the Sun?" Moniko asked in wonder.

“Moniko,” Father replied, “Hold the stones to your heart.”

As Moniko held the stones to his heart, taking one at a time, the stones then became radiant in energy as they held in form and merged with Moniko’s heart.

The Mother of the Elders then rose. She said, “Moniko, the energy of the stones you have placed within your heart has made your ability for transformation complete. With the blue, aqua, red, and orange, combined with the brilliance of your light and knowledge, may your thoughts on your adventures carry you in all chosen forms, through all Universes and to all beings. Be forevermore the choice of form on your journey, for all is one.”

Moniko then saw the room glow with streams of energy and light from each being within the room. As he watched in amazement, all streams of brilliant white light merged into one stream entering his heart as the energy of the stones had also done. In unison, Moniko heard one thought from the room. “We will always be with you, Moniko, as we are now you. Take this energy to always share with another on your journey.”

Moniko then turned towards the door of the great room, returning to where his Elder was waiting. As Moniko and the Elder turned to leave the door of the room, Moniko was silent. The Elder walked with Moniko as they returned to the arbor of the celestial gardens. As they entered the gardens, once again the butterflies greeted them. Moniko looked at the Elder, and with a single thought being shared, they both transformed into butterflies, enjoying the beauty of the garden, sharing the understanding and knowledge of being as one but yet infinite in their choices of creation, thought and form.

Chapter Eight

Spirit of the Halibut

As Moniko sat by the lake in his home in the Sun, his thoughts became intertwined with the aquatic beings that chose to find solace within the waters. Moniko sat with his hands under each cheek of his face, with thoughts of the wonderment of all that shared his home. As he watched over the water, Moniko found joy and amusement at the wise halibut, which would come to the surface creating a change with the ripples of the water. Knowing that the halibut chose to live deeply within the lake, at times they would come close enough to the surface as if they were playing a game with all that had chosen to live above, within, or around the great lake.*

Moniko rose to his feet, deciding to move closer to the edge of the lake. His energy seemed to stretch at this time and expand through all levels of his being, one with all he had chosen to observe. Moniko called out to the lake as he saw the wise halibut once again rise from the depths of the water. His attention was with the great fish. The wise halibut heard Moniko's call and swam to him.

Basking in the sun at the surface of the lake, the wise halibut's eyes became fixed on Moniko.

"Moniko," the wise halibut said as they connected their energy in thought, "Why have you called upon me at this time?"

Moniko captured the wisdom in the large eyes of the halibut and replied, "I have heard of many adventures of beings of our home. My thoughts are with wonder, of an adventure that you have chosen to share at this time, wise halibut."

With this being heard, the halibut started to dance just below the surface of the water, causing his mighty eyes to show the joy of thought. He was remembering an adventure.

"Moniko," he said, "I shall tell you of an adventure that shall forever live in the soul and spirit of the halibut.

"For the sprit of the halibut has not always chosen to live an existence in the waters of many worlds. There was a moment of creation when the spirit of the halibut chose to walk and live among many beings on land not covered by water. We chose to be a species of beings that were a part of creation that resembled the Elders, or yourself, in an existence that allowed the halibut to be of a great Universe, having not chosen the Sun as our home, or an aquatic life as our existence.

"I shall tell you of an adventure that brings such joy to thought, with understanding of the choice made in the spirit of the halibut. Our spirit was called upon by the Mother of the Elders to journey to the Earth world. There were many there who were ceasing to exist from lack of nutrition to sustain their physical bodies. Great separation existed between beings on Earth, and those that held the choice of how nutrition for the physical body was allowed to be given to the people of Earth.

“Great armies controlled the lands of Earth. Where food was plentiful, the armies of those who held the power on Earth would guard the supplies. They allowed themselves to exchange their spirits to feed those in need. The sea held great beings willing to become a source of nutrition, but vessels that could travel the seas were few to the Earth travelers in need. The Earth in this time held few known lakes of fresh water and beings that could provide the substance that was need for their physical bodies. The small beings that lived in the lakes were not yet large enough to feed the masses of travelers.

“Our spirit of the halibut observed the cries of the earth travelers. At this time the halibut had made a choice to create a home in the Sun. Elders were sent to assist our journey to our new home in the Sun. As the halibut listened to the guidance of the Elders that were sent, our thoughts were also connected to the cries heard on Earth. The desperation of choosing not to separate their spirit and return home before the journey had been completed was combined with a feeling of lack in being able to find completion of their journey and being able to sustain their physical bodies.

“During this time on Earth, many masters, as they were known, had taken journeys from the Sun to assist the Earth travelers on their journey. They came to help the travelers find the joy of our home in the Sun and to find remembrance of the Father and Mother of the Elders. The travelers had become lost in thoughts of survival and sustaining their physical bodies.

“Earth travelers would walk great distances over lakes of sand, scorched by heat, with only the memories of powers on Earth that controlled their lives. These powers would not allow the masses to find water and substance that would provide physical strength to their ravaged bodies.

“The travelers listened to the masters that had chosen to journey to Earth, speak of the joy and beauty of our home in the Sun, but their thoughts were unable to connect with that joy, feeling their spirits detaching from lack of food and water. The halibut walked in observance, feeling and connecting to the thoughts of the Earth travelers.

“As the halibut observed, they also found understanding and knowledge in a choice to provide and answer the cries of the Earth travelers. The halibut had been given the knowledge of the powers of transformation that all returning to the Sun are allowed to hold by choice.

“The spirit of the halibut gathered in council with the guidance of the Elders who had been assisting. Knowing of the power of transformation that they held eternally in their home in the Sun, the council of halibut chose to use this ability to assist those Earth travelers and was assisted by the Mother of the Elders.

“The halibut then began to transform their energy to create lakes throughout the vast dry beds of sand traveled by those in the Earth world. As they transformed their energy into water, the Mother of the Elders assisted in bringing to the surface of the Earth, plants and trees from the inner Earth, creating gardens out of vast dry lands to sustain the Earth travelers.

“Earth travelers were guided to oasis and gardens, finding there what was needed to replenish their physical bodies and allow their spirits to expand in remembrance of another home in the Sun, remembering their journey, allowing and accepting the guidance of the Elders to be renewed within the spirit of each.

“As the masses of the Earth travelers were led to be replenished, the creations of the halibut and Mother of the Elders would expand. As each expanded and grew greater gardens for the travelers, the food being consumed from the plants and trees could not sustain the growing number of travelers.

“The council of the halibut once again gathered to create new choices available to the Earth travelers, which would sustain the increasingly large numbers gathering. The halibut, with the guidance of the Mother of the Elders, agreed to transform their energy once again to provide what was needed by the Earth travelers to feed the masses.

“From the energy the halibut held in the lakes, they then transformed into beings of the lake, which would be able to provide the needed food for the Earth travelers continuously as desired.

“The halibut energy that they held banded at the bottom of the lake and began to transform them into aquatic beings known as fish. Choices were made to grow at the bottom of the lakes, rising to the surface as needed to release their spirits to the Earth travelers. The halibut continued to grow and release as needed.

“As the halibut continued to become plentiful in abundant supply, so did the Mother of the Elders’ creation of a paradise from the vast dry land. Masters of the Earth world called upon the halibut to feed the many travelers. A new unending cycle had been born of the halibut and the Mother of the Elders.”

Moniko listened deep in thought as the halibut spoke to him, understanding the transformation the halibut had chosen for the Earth travelers. The halibut knew Moniko understood, but did not have all the knowledge in the understanding, of what had been spoken by the wise halibut.

Moniko asked, “Wise halibut, why do you choose to be of the water in your home in the Sun, when you have the understanding of the transformation of your energy form created by your choices of thought?”

“Moniko,” the wise halibut replied, “Just as your energy becomes a beam to many Universes in understanding the young spirit within, so it is with the halibut to creation. Where we find peace, joy and love of creation, so shall be our transformation of choice.

“The spirit of the halibut is of many Universes of the Sun. Our form of choice as energy provides and sustains worlds with fresh water, not of the sea. Our beings grow and thrive in the womb of the Mother of the Elders, to provide nutrition that is known to assist not only those in a physical need such as Earth travelers, but also is consumed and released to provide spiritual food for souls that journey from the Sun and home again. We choose through transforming to live in water, the energy form of water as I am now, to assist as life force energy to all travelers.”

Moniko smiled as he stood and looked at the wise halibut. “Now and forever, I carry the knowledge and understanding of your choice of energy creation,” he said.

The Mother of the Elders then appeared next to Moniko. “Moniko, as you travel and assist in your journey of choice of creation, always journey with remembrance of the halibut. Remember that the life force of all creation is as pure as a drop of water and a grain of sand. Transformation of energy is yet the spark of thought that all creation becomes," said the Mother.

Moniko then watched with joy as many halibut surfaced on the lake, creating a circle and taking form as a circle of Elders. A great light beamed from the crowns of the Elders, creating a crystalline fountain, and as the crystalline water returned to the lake, so did the spirit of the halibut.

Chapter Nine

Soul Star

See the vision of the stars, as they are not only showing themselves as brilliant markers of light, but as completely infinite Universes, each of them. You are a Universe! You are a brilliant star, taking many forms.*

In a beautiful moment at home in the Sun, Moniko's thoughts were carried to the stars of the Elders. He could close his eyes and drift to the star of his choice. There were so many to choose from, each an intricate pattern inner-connected and with beautiful colors.

At this time, Moniko chose a brilliant star shaped with six points and having a purple glow. As the star glowed, stretching and shined throughout the Universe, in a quick moment the center of the star blinked with a brilliant white light.

As Moniko watched, the white light became an open door, as if he were being invited to the star. Moniko sprang to his feet, knowing what he had seen, and standing in pure elation at the possibility of returning to the star.

The Elder had spoken to Moniko many times about choosing to connect and become part of his desires. Moniko could then allow his energy to merge with the object of his desire, the energy of the brilliant star.

Moniko stood in silence as he allowed his energy to be joined with the energy of the star. As he did so, with a quick breath, he now stood within the doorway of the star.

As Moniko looked at the part of the star that he was now a part of, his eyes lit up. The light of the star enveloped and shone within his wonderment and curiosity. Moniko slowly turned and saw a beautiful bridge in front of him. There appeared to be woven strands of gold, intricately wrapping and intersecting to form the bridge that stood inside the doorway of the star.

“Moniko,” he heard a voice say. “Cross the bridge into my world, my home.”

Moniko could not see from where the voice was coming but felt a calm energy. He approached the bridge, eager to find the keeper of the voice.

“I shall cross your bridge, and join with you,” Moniko said.

“Come along, Moniko,” the voice said, “We will take this adventure together.”

As Moniko crossed the bridge, he scanned all that surrounded him, but did not see the keeper of the voice.

Upon reaching the other side, a path appeared made of beautiful golden stones. The stones on the path shined with a brilliance as if each held a part of Moniko's home in the Sun.

"Follow the path, Moniko," the voice said. Moniko could feel the encouragement from the voice. It had an energy that was playful. He then thought, "What a wonderful adventure this would be!" and danced down the path, hopping from stone to stone.

Moniko was enjoying dancing on the stones so much, he was not paying attention to how long and far he had traveled.

Lining the path were beautiful flowers interlaced with the stones, each taking the form of small bells, colored with all the colors of the rainbow. As Moniko danced, the bells of the flowers would ring out a tone of energy in unison to the sounds of the song Moniko was singing.

Moniko then came upon a blue structure at the end of the path. As he gazed at this structure, he saw that it was not as he knew it from his home in the Sun. He could see the structure as blue, yet the form seemed to remind him of the temples in the Sun. The shape of the structure was triangular and beautiful but unknown to Moniko's knowledge and understanding.

Once again, he heard the voice. "Moniko, step inside, for marvelous wonderment I hold for you."

Moniko looked for a door to enter, but could not find it.

“How shall I enter, I cannot find a door?” Moniko said.

“Moniko, there are no doors, just step inside,” the voice said.

Moniko approached the structure and to his amazement, he crossed through the energy barrier as if it did not exist.

Moniko gazed at what surrounded him. There were many shimmering mirrors filling the energy of the structure he had entered. As he moved through the structure, Moniko recognized in many of the mirrors that he could see images of adventures he had taken from his home in the Sun. Moniko watched the adventures once again, laughing and listening to the Elder, and seeing again what was so familiar to him. However, in other mirrors, Moniko saw adventures he did not have a memory of. Many times, he could still see the Elder there with him, and would laugh and become excited. Yet he was without any knowledge of the other beings and places in the mirrors that the Elder was sharing with him. He had no memory of these many adventures and journeys.

Again, Moniko heard the voice. “Moniko, you laugh, your heart is light as a beacon, but your energy does not fully understand what you are viewing through the many mirrors - your knowledge is absent.”

“I have felt such love, joy and peace within the mirrors, but I do not carry the understanding of many that I have viewed,” Moniko said. “And I do not understand why I hear you, but have not seen you, or know who you are.”

“Have I entered your home? Why am I seeing so many adventures through the mirrors of your home here in the star?” Moniko wondered to the keeper of the voice.

“Moniko, you have seen my being many times as you viewed the mirrors. You have seen me laugh, play, find understanding and knowledge. I have shared the love of who I am, within each mirror,” said the keeper of the voice.

Moniko replied, “Many mirrors show adventures I could reflect on again, and many showed adventures that are not part of my awareness. Also, I have not seen the keeper of your voice that invited me to your home in this beautiful star.”

“Oh, Moniko, but you have. For I am the echo, the voice of your soul, as the star is your being in true form. Though you have your home in the Sun, and your form that you choose to reside in, I am your thoughts, adventures, journeys, desires and evolution. I am your soul star. I am the vision, beauty, knowledge and understanding on levels known and unknown. I am your creation. I am the golden path of your wisdom. I am the bells that you sing with, your beauty unfolded. I am unlimited in how you choose to shape your energy, or how you choose to expand your adventures. I am always with you, for I am you - your creation, the shining star of your soul,” replied the keeper of the voice.

“All adventures that you have ever chosen or will choose are within your star. All visions you create are manifested through your desire. The bridge within your star is woven in creation. I will always be with you, Moniko, for I AM you. Moniko, return as you choose, with the knowledge that your star is within you in your heart. Now that you have heard the voice of your soul, sung with the song of your heart, and have walked the bridge to your star, we will never again be apart.”

Moniko stood in thought and felt his energy fill him with the colors of his soul star. He said, “Now as my star resides within me, we shall travel as one in understanding.” Moniko then took a deep breath and reconnected with the energy of his home in the Sun.

As he looked now to his soul star, the center of the star shifted in form and energy, showing a doorway of brilliant gold that shined throughout the Universes. Moniko returned to the Sun with a new understanding and knowledge of himself that would always guide him.

Chapter Ten

Fields of Clover

“Think of yourself standing in a field of clover that stretches further than you can see. Take my hand,” said the Elder.

As Moniko sat in a large field of clover in the Sun, his hands ran through the clover, feeling how it seemed to weave with his touch. In his home in the Sun, replenishing his energy from another substance was not necessary, but the choice to do so was a joy to Moniko. He grabbed the clover and brought a handful close to himself to smell the essence.

As Moniko sat and held the clover, his thoughts and visions drifted to another dimension that he knew so well. At another time in the field of clover, Moniko had sat with the Elder.

Both Moniko and the Elder were touching, holding and smelling the essence of the sweet clover. Sitting within the clover became a game between Moniko and the Elder. The Elder would join Moniko and soar above the field of clover, then hover so as not to disturb the clover with their dance and game.

The Elder said to Moniko, "As you see the endless field of clover, what desire becomes a part of who you are?"

Moniko thought silently while gazing over the field. "Elder, if I had but one desire to fulfill at this time, it would be to become one with the clover of the field."

"Moniko, by fulfilling this desire, what understanding would you gain?" the Elder asked.

"If I chose to be of the clover, then I might experience it as a reflection of our time in the field, Elder," Moniko replied.

"Stand at my side, Moniko. If this is your true desire, it shall be so," the Elder responded. As Moniko stood beside the Elder, a great opening appeared before them amongst the clover. As the energy settled into place, a pyramid of light took form.

As the Elder joined Moniko, they proceeded to enter the doorway of light energy that had taken form as the pyramid. As they entered the lighted pyramid, Moniko felt his energy become formless. His soul vision was able to become all that surrounded him.

Moniko could see that he was part of the field of clover, yet without form. As he allowed his soul vision to drift across the field of clover, he was aware that his energy was expanding and stretching. Now it was being absorbed into the energy of the field of clover. Moniko was the observer through his vision, but also the essence of the field.

Moniko was the field, but also above the field. He felt the coolness and freshness of being the clover. He felt the breeze that would dance under, around and above the field. He felt how the clover absorbed the energy of the wind and the soil. As Moniko had done many times, he felt the energy from deep within his home in the Sun, and now he felt the clover drawing the energy into his being.

As Moniko felt the joy of drawing energy from the Sun, he also felt renewed as the clover. Allowing the energy to dance within his being, Moniko observed from above that the clover would become many shades as the field renewed itself repeatedly.

Moniko felt the peace of being without thought, yet understanding the abundance of knowledge being absorbed as he allowed the energy to move over the field of clover.

The harmony of the field was perfection, which Moniko could now experience in many forms. He found understanding as the clover, and a knowing of how all energy could become the perfection of the clover.

Though the clover, Moniko was able to share his thoughts. The thoughts were unique and perfect, with each breeze assisting the clover to dance anew. It was a perfect evolution without feeling a need to do more. Moniko become part of the dance that had already changed with the motion of the breeze. He assisted in the movement.

Moniko's thoughts turned to the Elder, who was observing Moniko.

"Elder, my thoughts of becoming the clover and sharing the energy of the clover were connected to wondering how it would feel to play in the clover. Running my hands through the field, I felt the connection of each piece of clover touching each other endlessly. I became the energy of the clover, and observed my thoughts. They became connected to my chosen form, yet being the clover I did not feel any needs or wants as before. I was not attached to the thoughts. My only desire was to dance with the breeze, to draw the energy from deep within my home in the field, always renewed but yet complete. Elder, why might I feel this way as the clover, yet not as my form in the Sun?" Moniko wondered.

"Moniko, as you danced with the energy of the clover, you were in perfect movement. Your dance did not carry thoughts, wants, or needs. It became the perfect completion without beginning or end, only renewal. Your energy was infinite and without restrictions. The dances you have already completed," the Elder responded as he stood next to Moniko.

In that moment, Moniko watched as the Elder chose to become without form, yet very complete to Moniko.

Chapter Eleven

The Toad and the Tiger

*I*n a far off land in a far off place, we will take an adventure, which will become a memory for all time.

Tonight we shall talk about the Toad and the Tiger.

In many worlds, the Toad and the Tiger are not seen as being close as species are known to be. But ah, such is not the case of the Toad and the Tiger of a very special place.

Our home in the Sun is so very vast, yet connected in all ways. Peace is not sought, but accepted as part of our being.

As you have learned through these stories that have been shared, our home in the Sun holds many Universes as one.

The beings of what is considered the animal kingdom of the Earth world chose their creation in the Sun, as do all beings.

All beings of your animal kingdom in the Earth world also have a special world within the Sun.

From the smallest of beings, to the mightiest of the ages, they dwell in peace, in perfect communication, creating and choosing adventures and journeys as all beings of creation, of all Universes.

I want to share a specific story with you about the Toad and the Tiger. The Toad and the Tiger in the Sun choose to live in surroundings that are enjoyed whether in journey or in their home.

The Toad lives in a beautiful paradise of wonder. Trees and flowers are created at will as they choose to find their presence in the home of the vision of the Toad.

The Tiger still chooses to be of great might and strength, yet allows his heart to move before his strength in his home of the Sun.

Both the Toad and the Tiger have a deep fondness for the water in their world. The Toad and the Tiger are great swimmers.

The Mighty Tiger in the Sun is also the gentlest of creatures. The Toad, being a very wise being, also considers himself to walk as the Elders, in providing understanding and knowledge to all beings of the animal kingdom.

At one time in his home in the Sun, Moniko took a journey to the very special world of the animal kingdom.

In this world, a desert stands together with a rain forest, with large mountains draping behind as a wall in the world of the animal kingdom. As the beings of this world constantly choose to create and recreate their world, the beauty within is ever changing.

Surrounding the animal kingdom on the large mountains are many majestic waterfalls that are used within the animal kingdom world, as the eight-sided stones on the floor of the City of Light are used.

Each waterfall is a point of return for those coming back from journeys to other worlds and Universes, back to the home in the Sun.

Some beings choose to return by sliding down the falls to their worlds, while others may choose to return by passing through the energy fields of the waterfalls at the base of the mountain, entering directly into their kingdom.

When they return they are greeted either by those in the Sun that have gathered to greet them from the animal kingdom, or by many beings that have returned to the City of Light, traveling to this world also to greet those of the kingdom. All have shared many adventures beyond our home in the Sun.

On this occasion when Moniko journeyed to the world of the animal kingdom, two that were returning were being met by beings from Moniko's home in the Sun. One was from the City of Light. She was a beautiful being in the form of the Mother of the Elders. Her hair was very black, and her eyes were the color of the sky. The smile she shared could bring such joy and peace into the heart center that Moniko felt like flying as he observed her beauty.

Her companion from the home in the Sun was a being of the enchanted world. Upon seeing him, Moniko knew this to be true. The companion was very regal in his choice of form, draped in a long purple robe, wearing a golden crown on his head. In the middle of the crown, a beautiful red stone glistened in the shimmer of the waterfalls, combined with the bright light of the Sun.

At that moment, the regal enchanted being turned to the beautiful being of the Mother. As he raised his arms, his robe draped from his arms creating an energy field as the Elder had done so many times.

“Hmmm.” The Elder cleared his voice to speak.

“We have gathered here awaiting the return of these two. I must say I feel very anxious to greet them once again, to hear of their journey. I have been filled with great anticipation.”

“Oh, but my enchanted Lord, to hear of the return has created a dance within myself also,” replied another of the Elders. “They have chosen a journey to bring new understanding to all worlds.”

“So shall we greet them now?” the enchanted Lord said, as they joined hands and watched the waterfall.

At that moment, a mighty Tiger of the animal kingdom came sliding down from the top of the waterfall. As he slid down, his delight vibrated through all that were waiting. With a forceful splash in the pool at the foot of the waterfall, the Tiger was dancing within and above the water with joy! As the mighty Tiger returned from within the water, a Toad was now perched on his head, also making sounds of delight and joy.

“My Lord, there they are” said the beautiful Mother energy. The enchanted Lord then raised the arm of his robe, and very loudly said, “So you have now returned! Shake off the water and come greet us, as we have waited to hear of your journey.”

The Tiger and the Toad turned to listen to the voice and to see where it was coming from. As they saw the enchanted Lord and the beautiful Mother energy waiting for them, they sprang from the pool.

They dashed to their waiting companions, the quick speed of the Tiger in motion, and the Toad bouncing up and down trying to stay with the Tiger in his quick pursuit and haste.

As their two waiting companions watched, Moniko could not stop laughing with the same joy and essence as the four that were being reunited again.

When the Tiger and the Toad approached their companions, the Tiger paused to lay down, with the Toad resting once again on his back. The enchanted Lord looked at the two and smiled. “My two friends, now that you have returned to your kingdom, will you share the adventure that you chose?”

While the enchanted Lord spoke to the Tiger and the Toad, the beautiful Mother energy sat next to the Tiger, stroking his neck.

“I shall go first,” said the Tiger. “The choice of our journey was to the Earth world. Being the closest of companions in our home in the Sun, we chose our adventure there. In the Earth world,” the Tiger continued, “We found that those that chose our forms did not have to find themselves yet again to be companions, nor did I and the Toad equally enjoy the water and land forms.”

“We journeyed to a place in the Earth world much like our home in the Sun,” the Toad began to explain. “We found those with both anger and wonderment of our companionship. We took an adventure, a journey to a time where knowledge, understanding and joy became absent in the thoughts of Earth. We had chosen to visit a beautiful garden in the Earth world. As you are companions Lord and Lady in our home, we found two beings on the Earth world to be our companions. Though they were not similar in form to you, my Lord and Lady, the energy they held was similar to what we held in memory of you,” said the Toad.

“When we arrived in the Earth world garden, there was a peace like our home in the Sun. As our kingdom here finds acceptance of all, so did those of the kingdom in the Earth world,” the Tiger stated.

“The beauty of the garden was immense. All of the animal kingdom spoke to each of the beings that existed in the garden. Harmony was there in the air,” replied the Toad.

The enchanted Lord listened and thought, then spoke. “If that which you found in the Earth world held the beauty of your home in the Sun, why is it that you speak of anger?”

“At this time of the garden in the Earth world, there was also a City of Light centered in the garden. The beings in the City of Light were very focused in their intent to make the Earth world City of Light and garden like our home in the Sun,” the Toad replied. “Our two companions, in the form of your Lord and Lady, only held focus on their remembrance of the love they felt for their home in the Sun, yet they wished to partake of the Earth world in understanding and knowledge. They wished to find a balance of their energy with both worlds.”

“In making the choice of balance with the Earth world, our companions were sent away from the City of Light in the Earth world to remain in the garden that surrounded the City of Light,” the Tiger continued.

“We chose to stay in the garden with our new companions, in great joy. Although we were no longer of the City of Light, we were still dependent on the City of Light for our energy bodies to continue as in our home in the Sun,” said the Toad.

“The vibration from the City of Light in the Earth world began to shift throughout the garden. Our energy bodies began to change over time. We were no longer being sustained by the energy from the City of Light.”

“Many beings of the animal kingdom were finding their energy decreasing. The light energy was beginning to fade from that which we had known and understood,” responded both the Tiger and the Toad. “The City of Light in the Earth world was beginning to lessen in its form and ability to provide and sustain life. Our haven and kingdom in the garden of the Earth world began to know suffering and anger. The beings of the kingdom and the garden formed alliances with beings of like form, not understanding the separation that they felt. Separation was giving birth to the energy of anger towards beings unlike their own.”

“Our two companions also began to feel the energy shifts and were unable to sustain themselves through the City of Light. In the flash of a moment, as we observed the City of Light from the garden, many Elders arrived from our home in the Sun. Creating a circle around the City of Light, they joined their energy. As they created a field of energy around the City of Light, it was not to be seen again.”

“The Elders then returned, creating another field of energy around the garden of the city. When it was complete, the energy needed to once again sustain the garden as before was returned.”

“Communication between all beings of the garden then also returned. The energy has been restored to sustain the garden in the Earth world.”

“The Mother and Father of the Elders then appeared in the garden. They spoke of our companions, and to all beings of the garden, requesting a journey be taken beyond the garden and the field of energy that was now protecting the garden.”

“The Mother and Father of the Elders then spoke of the journey that would begin, to create a new Earth world. Those beings choosing to be a part of the journey beyond the garden would go without memory of the garden. They would take the memory of a promise made, that when they chose to return to their home in the Sun, the Mother and Father of the Elders, in all Universes would hear their call and bring them home.”

“Those that chose to stay in the garden, which once surrounded the City of Light in the Earth world, would do so with the field of energy protecting the garden until once again the City of Light could return to the garden for all beings to enjoy and flourish in as they did in their home in the Sun.”

“Our companions and many of the kingdoms of beings chose to do as the Mother and Father had requested, to restore joy to the Earth world.”

“We chose to follow our companions and teach temperance and tolerance to those beings on their new path.”

The Tiger and Toad completed their journey in separation beyond the garden of the Earth world. The Tiger taught strength, justice and fairness to the larger beings of Earth world's animal kingdom. The Toad taught agility, quickness, and survival to the smaller members of the animal kingdom of the Earth world. Once again, the Earth world would find peace and harmony for all beings, with the knowledge and understanding that all are equal in the energy of the Mother and Father of the Elders.

The two companions, in the form of the Lord and Lady, completed their journey, anchoring their light energy from the City of Light in the Earth world and their home in the Sun, and anchored the energy for all beings that would choose to journey to the Earth world.

They began a new path of understanding to once again rejoin all that is known in remembrance.

As the Tiger and Toad finished telling of their adventure, the Tiger once again rose to stand near the Lord of the enchanted world. With the Toad perched on the head of the Tiger, the beautiful energy of the Mother also sat on the Tiger and gently hugged his strong neck. The Lord of the enchanted world then spoke. "My two friends, the journey you have taken is both an end and a beginning for the Earth world and all that yet choose to journey to the Earth. With the garden surrounded by the energy of the Elders, the Earth world will forevermore have a place of rest as travelers choose to either return to the Sun, or any Universe of their choice. Though the garden now holds a vibration that is not visible to the Earth world, it shall forever exist, holding the light of our home in the Sun to be passed through and seen for the beauty that awaits on each journey and each chosen form. An eternal link between the Earth world and our world is established, where the vibration of life forever continues.”

As Moniko listened to the journey of the Tiger and the Toad, his thoughts became lighter than the Sun, knowing that the vibration of all life and creation never ceases in any form that is chosen, or any world or Universe.

Chapter Twelve

The Temple of the Elders

Moniko's adventure brings together a story of wonder and magic. At the time in Moniko's home in the Sun when he chose to take this adventure, many Universes were joining to unify once again.*

Many Universes had chosen not to be unified with the Elders and Sun for many cycles. They had made a decision to use the knowledge of their worlds and inflict their desires upon other Universes that were separated in thought from the worlds of love. These Universes were now deciding to once again release from the energy that had caused great chaos on the Earth world.

Beings were retuning to the City of Light in confusion. The blanket of separation had left beings without the knowledge of the Sun they had when they departed on their chosen adventures.

Many Elders joined in council at the Temple of the Elders in the City of Light. Within the City of Light, although all Elders are equal, the Council of Elders elects representatives.

The Temple of the Elders is truly magnificent. Beings returning to the Sun are welcomed at the Temple of the Elders. With the assistance of the Elders, they may choose to share the experiences of their journeys and receive guidance to help them understand the choices that were made.

Though Moniko had been to the temple often, at this time Moniko met another young spirit. The young spirit had just returned from an adventure to the Earth. During the journey, Earth was experiencing separation, and although much beauty had been created, there were also many thoughts that were not in harmony with the intent of the travelers.

As Moniko stood in the Temple of the Elders, the young spirit approached him. Moniko looked at the young spirit and saw the reflection of him self. He could not find words to describe all that he was feeling. In all the time spent at his home in the Sun, and in his many adventures, Moniko had yet to see another being who had chosen to take a form so closely mirrored to his own.

As the two stood looking at one another, the young spirit spoke. "Moniko, although you are confused, I have had a longing to meet you. You have traveled through many adventures, and I have also traveled journeys that we shared."

"I do not understand. I do not have a memory of who you might be," Moniko answered.

The young spirit smiled. “Though we are individual spirits in the form we have chosen, we are also one. At this time, we have been called to the Temple of the Elders to understand each other and the adventures and choices that we have made.”

As they stood in the Temple of the Elders, both intently observed the beings that had been returning to the Sun and choosing to meet with the Elders. Many looked as if they were in disbelief, while others appeared to be in complete knowledge of their home in the Sun, as if their journey was held in total remembrance.

Moniko turned to his companion again and said, “I have witnessed many beings returning home. The energy I feel and see at this time is different. You have also returned to the Sun, from your journey to the Earth world. I want to understand more clearly why they are returning now, as they are holding an energy unlike what I have witnessed before.”

The young spirit gazed at Moniko. “At this time on the Earth world great changes are occurring. Energy shifts are being created by great pulls of the Sun. The Mother of the Elders has called upon the womb of her creation in the Earth world to assist in cleansing the entire Earth world and to free Earth from beings of many different Universes that have chosen to journey to the Earth world. This cleansing is for the entire Earth world.”

LS Myers

The young spirit continued. “The energy of the City of Light has been magnified on the Earth world. Masses of beings at this time that have chosen adventures to the Earth world are remembering their homes in the Sun.

“Their energy is creating waves of elation and joy on Earth. The energy that is not of the wave is being brought into purification in the City of Light and your home in the Sun.

“As the Mother of the Elders called for her womb to be cleansed, unrest within the Earth, and above the Earth, is unfolding in the form of multitudes of smaller waves rippling towards the energy that has been sent from the City of Light.

“The darkest of choices and resulting vibrations on Earth are being absorbed into the waves of energy connected to the City of Light. The Mother of all Elders has created a mirror City of Light in the very core of her being. This City of Light has been there since the creation of the Earth world, just as you have known the City of Light in your home in the Sun.

“What was once a perfect alignment within the womb of the Earth world, became separated in energy between both the City of Light within the Earth and the City of Light in the Sun. Choices were made by universal beings that traveled to the Earth world, who did not hold a place in the council with the Sun. They created a cloak of separation between the cities.

“At this time, the light energy is once again uniting. As this happens, the City of Light within the Earth will vibrate through the imperfections, stretching to reunite all our energy with the Sun, and each City of Light.

“Energy is being transformed to light energy, creating an empowering force from within. As the seas and mountains of the Earth world create pathways for unity, many beings that have chosen to experience adventures in the Earth world are returning to the Sun and are in the midst of completing the journey of choice.

“As you have witnessed the confusion from those that appear to be without understanding, you are also witnessing those that are returning with a memory and complete understanding and knowledge of the journeys they have chosen, Moniko.

“As you have chosen, Moniko, to take a spirit form in the Sun, I chose at the time of the birth of the Earth world, to choose an Earthly form and to make my home in the City of Light within the Earth world.

“Within the City of Light of the Earth world, is yet a mirror of the City of Light and your home in the Sun. All that exists in your home exists in mine also. Above as below, all is one creation undivided.

“I share your soul star. As I am, you are. We are perfect mirrors of each other, but yet we are individuals within our journeys. Moniko, when you visited your soul star and gazed through the mirrors of the adventures, which were not of your knowledge or understanding, you were also viewing my adventures.

“As beings at home in the Sun and within my home in the womb of the Earth, we are also being unified in our understanding beyond the knowledge held before in our thoughts.

“Moniko, you have chosen to be of the energy of the Father of the Elders, and I have chosen to be of the energy of the Mother of the Elders. You are Moniko, and I am Mariah. We are complete within the energy of both the Father and Mother of all Elders, and within the great band of universal energy that has now chosen to bring all souls into unity. We have all chosen to be of one home, the Universe of light.”

“Mariah, as we now journey, will our adventures be as one? Though we both have individual energy forms and thoughts, will our choices be unified?” Moniko inquired of Mariah.

“Moniko, we do not hold any separation. We may continue to choose adventures in the energy of the Father and Mother as requested in our Universe of light. We are complete in being and one in thought. We are here to assist all beings to become reunited and complete in vibration,” Mariah replied.

Moniko beamed in his energy as Mariah spoke. How wonderful, he thought, for all Universes to be as one. For the love that Moniko shared in his home could be one with the vibration of all beings.

“Mariah, I welcome you in honor of all creation,” Moniko said. He then reached for Mariah’s hands, joining energy. They glowed in a beautiful golden light – the light of true sharing.

“Moniko and Mariah,” they heard voices say, “Welcome home to the enfoldment of the light.”

As Moniko and Mariah turned, the Father and Mother of the Elders also connected their energy, and glowed with the brilliance of both Suns within the City of Light.

Moniko and Mariah then looked above themselves in the Temple of the Elders, witnessing all the soul stars dancing on the great wave of energy bringing all beings home again.

*L S Myers is a writer who has built, written and maintained her 50-page website (www.myspiritualwindows.info) prior to writing Adventures of Moniko. Her passion for writing and bridging understanding through spoken words has been life long.*

Her personal writing includes poetry, topic oriented explanation, journaling, and expression through writing to educate, expand, opening creative thought processing between herself and that of the reader.

She was born in Northeast Iowa, and spent the first twelve years of my life in a rural setting. Looking back, realizing what a gift this had been, being able to spend her days with a dog, and a horse. Learning to appreciate early in life, the beauty of the soul in the animal kingdom. Spending endless days on the back of a horse, in the most remote places she could find. Taking naps on the back of a horse, while he ate. Communicating on many levels that were found to be natural in a young life, always with knowledge of this universe being much larger than could be seen.

Choosing to live life as the storyteller. Internal thoughts continually evolving into story form that could be expressed and shared.

Although her adult life has been working in the corporate field as a systems analyst, thoughts and focus were still of the storyteller.

LS Myers

Remembering the innocence and clarity of earlier days when endless thoughts were born of the love of connecting to those around herself, whether that might have been people, animals, or just the beauty of the world that surrounded her in those fields of clover as a child. Knowing then and now, of a presence much bigger than you and I as part of the universe we are.

Through this understanding that each of us, embodies the Elder, Goddess and Moniko as innocence, wisdom, and beauty. To love, honor and respect all creation as one.
